NEW ALVARADO ARENA SCENE OF RODEO SUNDAY

Amateur Cowboys Cavort At First Township Western Event

Washington township, through the efforts of the Amateur Cowboy Club, of Alvarado, may lay claim to a real, home-grown rodeo, it is noted, following roping, riding, and other western stunts at the new Alvarado Sunday.

A crowd of over 2000 thronged the recently-constructed stands, to witness the contests. L. E. Silva and Clarence King were in charge of the affair.

In the single roping contest, John Jess, of Alvarado, proved his superiority by walking away with first honors. Ed Osborn won the wild steer riding contests, and Emil Serrario captured the prize for bareback horse riding. Carl Zwissig and Emmet Sullivan, both well-known Niles men, were awarded the prize for team roping. John Bartram was the champion bronc rider, with Cecil Nunes and Anthony Basso, second and third, respectively. Harry Rowell, prominent cattlemen, served as arena master.

The next rodeo to be sponsored by the club will be held at the new arena on September 15. The grounds are located on the Whipple road, northeast of Alvarado.

COUPLE MAKE HOME HERE FOLLOWING MARIN WEDDING

Returned recently from a wedding trip throughout the northern part of the state, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Josephs, recently wed, have taken up residence at Niles.

Mrs. Josephs, the former Miss Carol Overacker, is the daughter of Mrs. C. B. Overacker, longtime resident of this district. Mrs. Josephs attended local schools and San Jose State college. She later took graduate work at the University of California at Berkeley, where she received her special credential for teaching in secondary schools. She is widely acquainted and popular in the Niles region.

Josephs, an Oakland contractor, has made his home in Niles for some time.

The wedding ceremony took place on August 1 at Sausalito, Marin county. The rites were private, with the couple attended by Mrs. Overacker.

Former Local Gridder Gets Head Coach Post

Al Collins, former Washington Union High school and St. Mary's college football star, and more recently assistant coach to Jimmy Underhill, at St. Mary's High, Berkeley, has been appointed to succeed Underhill at the Berkeley school, it was announced last week.

Collins, who lived formerly at Newark, was one of the best all-around players ever developed at the Centerville school, in the days when the old "dust bin" was situated on Fremont avenue. His long runs to touchdowns were features of almost every game, when Centerville met and took the measure of such teams as Berkeley High, Alameda, Galileo, McClymonds and Piedmont.

Collins played end for the Galloping Gaels with Underhill, during the period the latter gained nationwide honors as a halfback.

ALVARADO CHAMBER MOVES FOR LARGER FIRE DISTRICT

Committee to Report on Public Sentiment at Meeting Monday

A complete committee report, in which the public sentiment on proposed changes in the Alvarado fire district will be reflected, is to be heard Monday night by the Alvarado Chamber of Commerce, which organization is sponsoring a move to have the present district abolished, and an adequate one substituted.

Preliminary investigation has revealed that the present district, in addition to commanding an assertedly high tax rate for the protection offered, is far too small to warrant the purchase of new fire fighting equipment. It is pointed out that Alvarado's present department is inadequate to cope with modern needs.

In order to form a new district, it will be necessary to secure the signatures of fifty Alvarado people on a petition requesting a hearing on the matter of abolishing the old district. The hearing will be followed by an election, if authorities see fit. With the old district dissolved, a new one will be formed, to take in a larger territory. James Wasley, George Oakes and James Hunter, members of the public relations com-

JUDGE PETER CROSBY DISQUALIFIES SELF IN SLOAN CASE

Scheduled for hearing before Judge Harris, at Oakland, on August 16, the Sloan-Hirsch foreclosure case was again delayed when Harris transferred the case to the court of Superior Judge Peter J. Crosby, who, in turn, disqualified himself, and sent the case back to Judge Harris. The latter continued it, and will hear the testimony on September 17.

The hearing will be on a petition filed by E. H. Hirsch, asking that he be allowed judgment by default. It is said that Hirsch holds that his original claim filed last November, asking for foreclosure proceedings, was not answered in due form by the Sloans, who had immediately petitioned their case to the federal court, under amendment 75 of the existing bankruptcy laws. Subsequent supreme court decisions nullified section "s" of the above amendment, and reopened the case, whereupon the Sloans filed under the new state law.

Local Tomatoes Begin Flow to Eastern Market

Washington township tomatoes began their steady flow into the eastern markets last week, when the H. P. Garin Company, at Centerville, dispatched the first carload from the local terminal. A car a day has followed the initial shipment.

Mixed cars, to contain carrots, peas, onions, egg plant, tomatoes and numerous other vegetables will begin leaving this district soon.

MRS. NAOMIE VIEUX CALLED BY DEATH AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mother of Prominent Local Men Passes At Mission

Southern Alameda county lost one of its most beloved pioneer women Monday, when Mrs. Naomie Vieux, aged seventy-seven years, passed away at Mission San Jose, after months of illness. Hope had been held for her ultimate recovery several weeks ago, when she appeared to rally from her sickness.

She was the wife of Octavien Vieux, a resident of this district, and the mother of Leon, Jack, Alfred and Robert Vieux, all prominent local men; Mrs. Octavia Jersild, and another daughter, Mary. A sister, Mrs. Rosaline Athenour, and a brother, Alfonse Pelligrin, also survive.

Mrs. Vieux, who was a native of France, had lived in this region for many years. The Vieux ranch, situated on the hilltop southeast of Niles, was her home.

Funeral services will be held this morning, from the Berge mortuary, at Irvington, at 9 o'clock. A solemn requiem high mass will follow, at 9:30 o'clock, at the St. Joseph's church, Mission San Jose. The Rev. Father John Leal will officiate.

Interment will be in the St. Joseph's cemetery, at Mission San Jose.

ORIENT CHAPTER TO HAVE CARD PARTY ON SEPTEMBER 6

Hartley Taylor, it was learned here Tuesday from Bernice Boyd, worthy matron of the local chapter. The affair will be given by the East Bay Matrons and Patrons Association. J. P. Boyd, of the Centerville unit, is chairman of the ways and means committee for the evening.

On September 6, the Orient chapter will give a card party at the Masonic hall, Centerville, to which the public is cordially invited. Miss Boyd is in charge of arrangements.

September 11 is the date set for "brothers' night" at which Frank Katzer, associate patron, will officiate.

Old Resident of Niles Happy in New Home

While stopping in Sacramento last week, on his return from the middle west, Norman H. Parks, publisher of the Township Register, had the pleasure of a short visit with Mrs. E. B. Macpherson, former Niles resident.

Mr. Parks found Mrs. Macpherson enjoying wonderfully good health, and domiciled in a home of unusually artistic furnishings and finish. Mrs. Macpherson has an artistic tempefament, which has been written into her Sacramento home in a most pleasing manner.

Mrs. Macpherson is living alone, but near her sister's residence, and with close neighbors, she is in the midst of congenial surroundings. Through Mr. Parks she sends best regards to all of her old friends in this township.

PETITION DELAYED FOR IRVINGTON FIRE DISTRICT

Start of petitions for the formation of a fire district at Irvington was delayed again this week, when the proper forms, to have been sent by county authorities, failed to arrive.

R. J. Wright, president of the Irvington Businessmen's Club, body which is sponsoring the move, will attempt to have the circulation under way next week. He is vacationing in the Klamath river region at the present time.

The attempt to form the Irvington district will be the second within a period of two years. The former effort ended in defeat by a margin of only a few votes.

ALVARADO MIDNIGHT THIEVES SOUGHT BY POLICE

Smashing a front window at the Alvarado store of K. Matsumoto, Wednesday night, thieves stole ladies' and men's wearing apparel, jewelry and cigarettes amounting to $400, then evidently lost heart and abandoned the stolen goods in a vacant lost across the street from the establishment.

Matsumoto, who lives with his family in the back of the store, reports to police that he retired at about 10:30 o'clock on the night of the robbery. The thieves must have worked quietly, since no sound was made to disturb the proprietor.

Although most of the loot was abandoned nearby, twenty-two rolls of printed goods and several pairs of wool trousers have not been recovered.

Police are working on the case this week.

APPENDECTOMY

Elmer Norby, Reid Brothers factory foreman, at Irvington, is rapidly recovering after an operation for appendicitis, undergone at the San Francisco veterans' hospital.

A partial list of the entering students: Keichi Shimizu, Jack Rathbone, Vernon Ellsworth, Iwao Egashira, Robert Zeigler, Gwendolyn Millet, Doris Machado, and Irma Hodges, will enter the University of California, at Berkeley.

Sam Dinsmore, Arthur Duarte, Glodena Bowers, Evelyn Pond, Marian Peterson, Frank Gygax, Joe Hernandez, Ted Dundas, Marjorie Griffin and Leona Solon will all enter San Jose State college.

Other local students at the University of California include, Helen Rogers, Estelle Martenstein and Muriel Fournier.

JUNIOR CHAMBER CRACKS DOWN ON ALLEGED BRAWLERS

Peace Disturbance Charges Brought After Battles At Canyon Dance

Cracking down on a trio who allegedly disrupted their dance Saturday night, the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce created a precedent in this district in dealing with local dance fights. this week, when they brought charges of disturbing the peace against three local men.

The three, who are slated to appear tomorrow afternoon for preliminary hearing before Judge J. A. Silva, at the Niles court house are; Victor Costa, Clifford Silveria and Harley Gibson.

With more than 600 in attendance, the dance progressed peaceably until shortly before midnight, members said, when a series of fisticuffs broke out. No amount of persuasion could prevent recurrent fights, all said to have been caused in one way or another by the three who will appear tomorrow.

After banishment of the belligerants from the grounds by Nightwatchman Art Roderick and Deputy Sheriff Hugo Radbruch, who were called to the scene, the dance went on uninterrupted.

In speaking of the action taken, Junior Chamber members stated that hoodlums and rowdies will not be tolerated at future civic group affairs. In the past, fights and disturbances have been looked upon as a more or less necessary evil. It is pointed out that the type of people who attend the Junior Chamber functions, from all sections of the bay district, carry away with them a sordid impression of the town, after witnessing brawls on the dance floor, or near the halls.

Over 525 Students Will Register For W.U.H.S. Classes

Largest Freshmen Class in History of School Is Anticipated

Summer's balmy vacation months will end Monday for more than 525 Washington Union High school students, when the fall term opens. The incoming freshmen class, the number of which is computed on the basis of grammar school graduations in this district, will be the largest in the history of the school. A. J. Rathbone, high school principal, stated that between 160 and 180 shining, new first-year students will be on hand for the initial class bell. Following assembly and registration in the morning, school will close at noon Monday.

A revised class system, in which the periods will be an hour long instead of forty minutes, will be started this time. Classes will take up at 8 a. m. this term, which is ten minutes earlier than in the past. The interval between periods will be three minutes.

An increase in the number of pupils from several of the outlying sections will necessitate an additional bus-run this time, Rathbone said. The Niles bus, instead of passing through Niles to pick up Decoto students, will reverse its course this term, and enter Niles from the north after passing through Decoto, where it will pick up a few students. The Alvarado bus, which stopped heretofore at the Alviso school, will be filled to capacity with Alvarado youngsters. An extra bus will make a trip to the Alviso school and back. Bus drivers, who will pilot the big vehicles this time, met at the school yesterday morning to undergo tests given by Lieut. George Barron, of the California Highway Patrol. They

IT WASN'T AN AD AT ALL, BUT IT ACTED LIKE ONE

A hundred strong they came; counted by a plain superintendent who hadn't advertised for a soul, and they all wanted to sell his new line of furniture and lamps. Such is the advertising value of a straight news story in the Register.

It all happened several months ago, when the Reid Brothers plant at Irvington first began its fabrication of incidental furniture and decorative lamps. C. H. Walters, plant superintendent, took the Register reporter through the factory, pointed out interesting highlights, and said a news story would be a helpful thing. But in addition to spreading word of the furniture and lamps, the published story lured over 100 would-be salesmen, who knocked on Walters' office door at all hours, asking that they be made representatives.

Woman Recovering From Auto Accident Injury

Mrs. Nellie J. Langley, of Niles, is recovering this week from injuries when she was thrown through the windshield of a car driven by Mrs. Jack Geib, of Niles, recently.

The crash occurred when Mrs. Geib's car crashed into the back of one driven by Lupe Marin, at the intersection of the Centerville road and the Mission highway.

Future Farmer Tests May Revolutionize Corn Raising

Elimination of laborious cornfield work, called "suckering" in farm parlance, may be the outcome of a series of experiments now underway by members of the Washington chapter, Future Farmers, it was learned Saturday.

Paul Dougherty, advisor of the chapter, and Prof. C. H. Poole, corn expert, from the University of California agricultural school at Davis, visited several test plots in this district Saturday. They spent the greater part of their time at the Silva ranch, on the Alvarado creek road, where Anthony Silva, member of the chapter, is conducting exhaustive tests with nine varieties of corn, only two of which are grown to any extent here.

Silva has set out the test crop in regularly spaced rows, and suckered and left unsuckered alternate plots about fifteen feet in length. Each plot contains all of the nine types. As the ears ripen and are harvested Silva will keep a strict record of the number of marketable ears from both the unsuckered and suckered plots, as well as a record of the average weight of the ears.

If the test shows that the unsuckered plots yield as heavily as the suckered ones, the old-time theory that the suckers detract from the main plant will have been exploded, and the task rendered superfluous. Dougherty points out that an unsuckered field produces more feed for stock, in addition to being less work during the early season. The tests, however, will hold only for Santa Clara valley crops, Dougherty said, adding that hill crops may react differently.

Silva will also keep a record of the extent of worm damage in the ears as they are harvested,

MOONLIGHT DANCE ATTRACTS 600 TO PARK PAVILION

A warm, quiet evening, plus good music and a congenial atmosphere lured more than 600 devotees of the dance to Stonybrook park, in Niles canyon, Saturday night, to attend the first annual moonlight dance, sponsored by the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Numerous members of the Pleasanton, San Leandro, Oakland and Berkeley organizations were on hand, as well as people from other bay points. All were unanimous in their approval of the affair. Officers of the local junior group were enthusiastic about their latest contribution to the annual social calendar here, adding it was more than a financial success.

The music for the occasion was furnished by Campos Sunny Californians, augmented for the occasion.

MANY PEACHES

Sixty cars of clingstone peaches, to be converted into succulent dessert dishes, passed through the F. E. Booth cannery at Centerville last week. The fruit cars arrived at the plant in several sections, the last of which came in Thursday.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Manuel Perry, Decoto man, was rushed to an Oakland hospital last Friday, suffering from gall stones. An operation was thought necessary.

Miss Marian Fogg, local music teacher, left with her mother last weekend for Byron, where Miss Fogg will take up her duties as teacher in the grammar school there.

GUILD PLANS ANNUAL PICNIC MEETING FOR AUGUST 28

Reopening its active season after a summer rest, the Ladies Guild, of the Niles Congregational church, will hold its annual picnic on Wednesday, August 28, at the home of Mrs. E. A. Ellsworth, president.

Luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock noon, after which the afternoon will be spent in the spacious gardens of the Ellsworth home. Members are requested to contact Madames A. A. Hatch, Charles Myrick and E. A. Ellsworth in regard to the menu.

Inasmuch as the affair will launch the fall program of the guild, officers are hoping for a good attendance.

Reckless Driving Costs Motorist $35 at Court

Lester Silvey, involved in a First street auto crash here recently, was fined $35 by Judge J. A. Silva at the Niles court house Friday afternoon. Silvey's car crashed into one owned by Herman Duarte. Officer Duffy Lewis made the arrest.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara, who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

"I'll do what I can for you, Chief. I'll ask Bender. He's assistant to the file clerk."

"See him in the mess-hall at noon. Good-by, Benny and thanks a lot."

From San Quentin Dan McNamara motored down to San Jose and called upon I. Abrahams, ladies' tailor.

"Mr. Abrahams, have you ever made a tailored suit for a girl with a nose that something has smashed flat in the middle?"

"Sure I have," Abrahams replied. "You mean Miss Penelope Gatlin, don't you?"

Abrahams looked in his card index cabinet, then opened a large book in which he kept his customers' measurements recorded, together with a sample of the cloth from which each order has been cut. Dan McNamara unhesitatingly placed his finger on one of these samples. "That was the cloth."

"Sure, that was the suit I made for Miss Gatlin two years ago."

"Did Miss Gatlin live in this city? If so, I'd like to have her address."

Ten minutes later, McNamara was pressing the bell at the door of a house in South Mariposa street.

"Does Miss Gatlin live here?" he queried.

"Not any more. She used to live here with her mother, but she disappeared about two years ago, and her mother sold this house to the lady I work for."

"Where is Mrs. Gatlin now?"

"We don't know."

"Thank you," and McNamara directed his driver to go to the Security Trust company, where he sent his card in to the president. He was received promptly.

CHAPTER VI

"DO YOU happen to have an account in the name of Penelope Gatlin?" Chief McNamara asked the banker.

"Both a trust account and a checking account, Chief. We had her father's account for years before he was unfortunately killed in an automobile accident some eight years ago. We had the account of his divorced wife for quite a while, too, but she has closed that."

"Do you know where she lives at present?"

"I do not." He was interested. "But I remember her quite well—a very beautiful woman. Her first husband was a splendid chap—retail shoe dealer in this city, and very prosperous. He and his wife had a row and she divorced him and got the child. Gatlin was permitted by the court to have the child on two Sunday afternoons a month, and one day he took her to a ball game and they sat in the bleachers. A long hard ball flew into the bleachers and flattened the little girl's nose; Gatlin rushed the unconscious child to a hospital and his ex-wife came and took her home before anything but emergency treatment could be given. Gatlin suspected she was going to try to cure that ruined nose by prayer—so he kidnaped the child, was caught, arrested, and did sixty days in the county jail.

"While he was in jail Mrs. Gatlin fled to Europe with the little girl, and Gatlin was desolated. Subsequently Gatlin sold out his business, made most of his estate liquid and established a trust with us in favor of himself and daughter. He had made a settlement with Mrs. Gatlin.

"When his wife fled to Europe with the child, Gatlin ceased to deposit the monthly check to her credit, in the belief that she'd write to know why. She didn't, but in some other manner he located her, and started for Europe with the intention of stealing the little girl from her. On the way to the station, an automobile hit the taxi he was in and Gatlin was killed."

"Did he leave a will?"

"He did. His daughter was his sole beneficiary. We were the executors and probated it. There was the ten thousand dollar letter of credit he had purchased just before starting on his fatal trip, and half a dozen pieces of city realty, which has since increased enormously in value. We advertised for the heir but received no answer, so the estate was closed and we handle it now, as trustee."

"How do you know Mrs. Gatlin has become Mrs. Merton?"

"She has leased the house Gatlin gave her in the divorce settlement, and about two years ago, when the lease expired and the old tenants departed, she came down here to have the place renovated and secure a new tenant. It was only then that she heard of Gatlin's death. She came to this bank, with her husband, making inquiries about Gatlin's estate, and tried hard to get control of it, but she was out of luck. That's how we located the heir."

"What were the conditions of the trust?"

"The income was to be permitted to accumulate and be reinvested and the child was to have two hundred and fifty dollars a month until her eighteenth birthday, when the total income from the trust was to be turned over to her. She can never touch the principal, however, although Gatlin did provide that she might have up to ten thousand dollars of it at any one time if, in the judgment of the trustee, the emergency requiring such withdrawal was deemed good and sufficient. Gatlin had faith that the real estate, if held long enough, would appreciate tremendously—and it has. The trust is now worth three-quarters of a million and the income is close to twenty thousand a year."

"You say Penelope Gatlin has a checking account also? Has she ever asked for an emergency withdrawal of ten thousand dollars?"

"No."

"Is her checking account active?"

"Not very. She draws checks sporadically. Her checking account has interested us considerably for the past two years, because her monthly statement and dead checks have all been returned by the post office. With the exception of about a dozen checks made out to local merchants and probably in payment of her bills, Miss Gatlin's checks have all been in favor of one Ella Cates, of San Francisco. We traced the Cates woman down through the indorsements on the checks, but she stated she didn't know Miss Gatlin's address; that Miss Gatlin visited her occasionally, wrote out checks and asked her to cash them for her at the local grocery store or drug store. These people stated that Ella Cates never received the money at once, but that they collected the checks for her and then gave her the money. I don't like the looks of this, Chief."

"I'll soon find out all about it," McNamara promised. "And I know where Penelope Gatlin is—only I'm not going to tell you now. Would you mind letting me look over her old bank statements and the dead checks?"

The banker readily granted him the privilege, and McNamara went through the checks carefully, noting those drawn in favor of Ella Cates. The last one drawn was in favor of a man named Hugh P. Taylor, in sum of five thousand dollars, and deposited by him to the credit of his account in the Federal Trust company of San Francisco.

"I have all the information I want, with this exception." He drew forth one of the rogue's gallery photographs made at the central station by the police photographer. "Is that Penelope Gatlin?"

"That's the girl, Chief. Is she in trouble with the police?'

Dan McNamara laughed. "Not at all. She's the sweetest little thing on earth. The only trouble she's been in is that she's been lost. Amnesia. Can't remember who she is or anything about her past life. Has several aliases she used at will."

"How interesting—and how sad."

"Neither interesting nor sad—to me. We handle lots of cases like this. They're curable. You'll be good enough to regard this interview as strictly confidential, of course. It would be very embarrassing for the girl if news of her unfortunate predicament should leak out, for, of course, after her mind has been restored to its normal functions, she will have no memory of the period in which she has been lost. I know a doctor that will fix her up in jig time."

"And after he's done that," the banker suggested, "have a plastic surgeon fix her nose. She used to be as lovely as a violet."

"Sorry about the nose," McNamara lied, "but I've had the best plastic surgeons in town examine it and there's no hope." He held out his hand. "Thanks for your courtesy. You've been a great help. Meanwhile, don't send out any more of those bank statements and dead checks. Mum's the word."

Back in San Francisco McNamara went directly to the city prison and looked over the blotter to see what strange fish his men had brought in during his absence.

He found a woman, an old offender, booked for drunkenness, and ordered her sent to his office. When she arrived he locked the door, and fingerprinted her on the appropriate card, after which he lectured her on the error of her ways. Then he went upstairs to the identification bureau and asked the filing clerk to have pointed out to him the filing cabinets containing criminal records for the year 1914-15 and 1916.

He was searching for a face that was photographed on his remarkable memory, and at last he found it. It was that of a young woman, black-haired and with a "saddle" nose, but not quite so badly deformed as Nance Belden's nor did the contour of the face resemble Nance Belden's. However, since the original of that photograph had, to the chief's knowledge, been dead six months, he decided it would do. He slipped this record into his breast pocket and went back to his office. Here he carefully removed the three photographs from the card to which they were pasted in a row across the top. Below the row of photographs appeared the typewritten criminal history of the subject and in appropriate spaces on the reverse of the card appeared the subject's fingerprints.

McNamara picked up the fresh card, upon the reverse of which he had fingerprinted the woman who at times drank too much. He placed this card in the typewriter of his secretary, who had gone for the day, and carefully filled it in with Nance Belden's criminal record. Then he pasted over the top of this record the three photographs of the dead woman he had taken from the old files, carefully burned all the evidence of the substitution, went upstairs and handed the record to the clerk, who replaced it in the files.

Promptly at six-thirty a knock sounded on his door, and to his hearty "come," Messrs. P. Flynn and A. Angelloti entered.

"I sent for you two boys to tell you in no uncertain terms to lay off Miss Rebecca Lanning," the chief began. "However, I owe it to you to tell you why. Miss Lanning is a friend of mine of long standing, and I know she is a worthy and dependable woman and absolutely truthful. She isn't interested in this girl, Nance Belden. It happened this way. I regarded that girl as a nut, see—and haven't any confidence in the bone that does our medico-legal work. So I took Nance up to see Dr. Stephen Burt. Miss Lanning is his nurse. She was very kind to the girl—very understanding—and the Belden brat got stuck on her. She has an affection complex, understand."

Flynn and Angelloti nodded languidly.

"Apparently," the chief continued, "Nance hasn't any friends. The poor, lonely kid remembered Miss Lanning, so she wrote and asked her to visit her in the pen—and now the warden swears she smuggled out of San Quentin, a letter with Nance's plan of escape. Well, maybe she did, but if she did, Miss Lanning didn't know it.

"Now, when the Belden girl came to Miss Lanning's home she realized she couldn't harbor her. Within a minute after the girl entered, Miss Lanning had me on the phone.

"'I've just heard a thump out in the hall,' says she. 'I think the girl's fainted. Better let me put her to bed, Chief, and have Doctor Burt come over to bandage her wound; then the ambulance can call for her in the morning.'

"I thought that was a good idea. When she came back Nance was just going out of the door. The trouble was that Miss Lanning thought the girl was unconscious, but Nance heard her and beat it. Now it's up to you two to find her."

"How long have you known Miss Lanning?"

"Quite a while," McNamara lied. "Leave her alone from now on and don't waste your time watching her house. The Belden devil won't come back there again. That will be all, boys."

Outside of Chief McNamara's office door, Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angelloti looked at each other meaningly.

"He's up to his old tricks, Amadeo."

"Always feeling sorry for the under dog, Pat. He makes me sick."

"I'll bet a month's salary he knows where the Belden girl is this minute.'

"I'm not quitting such a hot scent, Pat."

"We'll just split that two hundred and fifty-dollar reward—and see how the chief likes it. That old Lanny girl warned us to step softly or she'd have us broke, didn't she? Well, where does she get her drag with the old man?"

A. Angelloti jumped to the natural conclusion of his kind. "She's got something on him, I suppose."

"Sure she has. She knows he knows where she's hid the body."

"We've got to see the Belden girl's photograph and thumb prints and Bertillon measurements. They're in the upper office."

They went up to the identification bureau, called for the record of Nance Belden and studied it for a couple of minutes.

"I'd recognize that dame now if she was burned to ashes." Thus Angelloti.

Flynn drew his partner into a corner. "The girl was wounded. We know that from the guard that shot her and we're sure of it after looking at the blood in that speedboat."

"If she'd bled that much all by herself she'd never have gotten ashore under her own power, Pat. I'm inclined to think one of the crew got hit, too."

"There's hope for the dagoes yet, my boy. You're right. It stands to reason some doctor fixed them up. Now, then, what doctor?"

"Dr. Stephen Burt," Angelloti decided.

"It stands to reason that if this Doctor Burt dressed their wounds last night he'll call on his patients every day until they're out of danger. If we catch him at his dirty work there ought to be a little something in this on the side, Amadeo."

An hour later they pulled up in front of Stephen's house, and behind a coupe parked at the curb. Flynn, circling around it, noticed a red cross on the radiator.

They circled the block and returned, to park at the lower edge of the block. At a quarter past eight they saw Stephen come out, bag in hand, enter his coupe, and drive away. So they followed him and came, in time, to Dan McNamara's house, into which they saw him enter, as they rolled slowly past.

"He had a latch key. He didn't ring the bell. An' no lights in the front o' the house," Angelloti cried excitedly. "Drive back, Pat, and I'll get the number."

"That house," Flynn informed him dramatically, "is the habitat of His Royal Highness, Daniel McNamara, Chief of Police of San Francisco. I always knew he was a fox, but I never suspected he was fool enough to hide an escaped convict in his own house. That situation is ticklish an' requires calm an' mature deliberation.

"Maybe you're right at that, Amadeo. Well, we'll stick round a while."

They stuck around half an hour before Doctor Burt came out, and drove away. "Drop off an' watch the house," Flynn suggested to his partner, "an' I'll follow his nibs. I'll be back later."

He trailed Stephen Burt to the latter's home and saw him pull up across the sidewalk, preparatory to opening the door of his garage. So Flynn rolled past, circled, picked up Angelloti at the end of the block.

"After you an' the doc left, I went up to the corner drug store and phoned the chief's house, but nobody answered," Angelloti confided. "The gang's in there, all right."

"I'm as nervous as an old woman," Flynn confessed. "I wish I had a drink."

Angelloti was a resourceful fellow. "Let's call on that Lanning woman, apologize for our rough work last night, an' maybe she'll slip us some o' that pre-war Bourbon again."

Flynn nodded, and they drove to Lanny's house. Lanny received them coldly. "Have you come to search my house again?" she demanded irritably.

No mule's face could possibly have been longer and sadder than P. Flynn's. "We didn't come to annoy you, Miss Lanning. The chief's give us the inside story. We just called to apologize for even suspectin' you."

"I'd Recognize That Dame Now If She Was Burned to Ashes."

"An officer," Angelloti explained, "has got to do a lot o' things he don't like to do in the discharge of his duty. The apology goes double, Miss Lanning."

"It's accepted." Then they shook hands. "How about a shot in the arm?" Lanny, the worldling, suggested, much mollified.

Angelloti shrugged expressively. "Well, seein' as how," P. Flynn murmured. So they had three drinks and spent a very pleasant evening with Lanny and she was loath to see them depart.

Now, Lanny was aware that Stephen had planned to visit his queer patients after dinner that night. So she telephoned—and Dan McNamara answered.

"How's everything, Dan?"

"I haven't seen the patients, but my chief of staff was up waiting for me, and reports everything jake."

"That's all I wanted to know. Thanks, Dan. Oh, by the way, Flynn and Angelloti called on me again, tonight."

"What's that!" The chief's voice was a roar. "What are those two eggs up to? I told them to lay off you."

"They're doing that, Dan. They just called to apologize. They spent the evening with me. They only left a moment ago."

"I know those two. It would never occur to them to apologize to anybody if they didn't have a reason. It's just as I suspected, Lanny. They're going to hang on to this case on the quiet and trail you around."

An anguished thought popped into Lanny's agile brain. "Oh, Dan, suppose they took a notion to trail Stevie!"

"Hush! You don't have to paint me any picture, Lanny. When did these two busybodies call at your house?"

"At nine-fifteen."

"Wait a minute." Lanny waited a minute and then McNamara said: "Stephen left here just about that time, so I guess we're safe tonight. And tomorrow I'll cover that loophole. I'm an ass not to have thought of it before. Good night."

In the morning Dan McNamara sent for Flynn and informed him he was to depart that night for Los Angeles to bring back a prisoner. Flynn begged Angelloti to keep his eyes on the job. But that night McNamara found other work for Angelloti. By the time Flynn returned, Angelotti was gone, and the same night, without a moment's notice, McNamara shot him up to Seattle on a similar job.

Dan let himself into the house that night with his latchkey, turned on the hall light and whistled. "Hello, everybody," he shouted. Nobody answered, so he hurried down to Nance's room. The door was open. He switched on the light and found a disordered bed with nobody in it. He searched the house thoroughly, only to discover he was alone in it; finally, on the living room table he found a note:

"Dear Chief: We think you mean well and we thank you for what you have done, but the dicks are watching this house. They trailed the doctor last night, but a friend of ours trailed them. Forgive us if we just can't trust any cop. Anyhow, it would be embarrassing for you if your men found us here. Good-by and good luck."

McNamara sat down. He was suddenly weak. So he hadn't fooled Flynn and Angelloti after all. The smart devils! Well, they might suspect all they pleased, but unless they had seen his guests and recognized Nance they could never prove anything.

He realized now that his act in sending them out of the state would clinch their suspicions; they would be sure to have somebody in their confidence keep the house under constant surveillance until they got back. Evidently they had sent a bungler and the ex-soldier had spotted the fellow—he wondered if Nance and her loyal friends had made a clean getaway.

The front doorbell rang and he went to answer it. A thin, bent man stood in the entrance, and even in the dim light from the hall McNamara knew him for an ex-convict in his prison suit of civilian clothes.

"Chief McNamara?" he queried huskily.

"Yes, I'm the chief."

"I got out of San Quentin this morning. I had a message for you, but I didn't want to come to headquarters to deliver it. Benny the Beetle told me to tell you to rest easy."

"Thanks, friend. Come in and rest easy yourself. Let's get acquainted." McNamara invited hospitably. In the clearer light of the living room he saw his visitor was far from being a well man. "What is it, kid?" he demanded. "Hop—or T. B.?"

"The old coughin' sickness, Chief. The prison directors shortened my term to let me out for treatment. As if I can get treatment anywhere," he added bitterly.

"Oh, yes, you can. I'm living alone here for the next thirty days, so I'll get a nurse in to take care of you, and you stay here."

The man looked at him suspiciously. "You mean it, Chief?"

"What did Benny tell you about me?" McNamara asked.

"He told me to trust you. He said you was one human being, even if you was a chief of police."

Dan changed the linen on Nance's bed, put the room in order, laid out a suit of pajamas and ordered his guest to bed.

"And now, me bold buckos," he reflected, "keep on trailing Doctor Burt to my house, if you feel like it."

He waited up until Stephen Burt arrived, and explained the situation to him. Stephen considered it a tremendous joke but commended his line of attack on Flynn and Angelloti.

"The man does need treatment very badly," he told the chief. "I'll send around a practical nurse early tomorrow morning to look after him, and I'll continue to call upon the poor devil nightly until further orders. We're both involved in a tricky game now and must play the hand through."

Doctor Burt was suddenly serious. "I do hope we haven't lost Nance, Dan. She's the most interesting psychological case I've ever seen."

"She ain't lost, but I'll bet a cookie she's well hid. But I'll locate her within twelve hours," Chief McNamara added, thinking of Ella Cates.

"I've run Nance's early history down since I saw her last, Doc," he announced suddenly. "I got busy the other day and luck was with me. She's an heiress, and her name is Penelope Gatlin. She got it on the nose by a baseball—a long fly into the bleachers. But I also discovered something else. It's a question whether she ain't just a natural nut. Her mother is. She led Gatlin a h—l of a life."

"No, I don't think it's congenital, Dan. There's something about that girl that's healthy—mentally and physically. Did you meet her mother?"

"No, but I'm going to run it down easy enough."

Stephen sighed. "Oh, poor Nance! I'm afraid she's beyond my skill, after all. A bad family history, Mac—very bad. There's a structural weakness in some families that never gets bred out, and I suspect poor Nance has an inheritance of mental instability from her mother."

"Well, with that busted nose, her inheritance and her hellcat mother, she certainly had a fine start on the road to the foolish farm, didn't she, Doc? Excuse me, there's the telephone."

Lanny was calling. "Dan," she quavered, "my house has been burglarized. They jimmied the back door, and for all I know the burglars are upstairs still. I'm watching the staircase—got my pistol covering it. Come over quick, Dan—please."

"Coming right away, Lanny." He hung up and faced Stephen. "Lanny has burglars. Into your car, boy, and we'll beat it over."

MORE ON FUTURE FARMERS

with an eye to finding varieties that are more worm resistant. Professor Poole stated that while corn with a tight husk may be more resistant to the moth, it is likely that the chemical make-up of the husk has more to do with resistance or the lack of it. He stated that tests are being conducted at Davis to shed light on this question.

The two common varieties included in the test are the Alameda sweet and the Golden Bantam. Other varieties included are: Sure crop sugar, Oregon ever-green, honey June, Purdue inbred Bantam, Selected Alameda sweet, top cross bantam, Bantam ever-green cross, Golden cross Bantam, and some special Alameda sweet developed by Silva himself.

The top cross seeds were furnished through the courtesy of Dr. Floyd Winter, of the Associated Seed Company experimental farm, at Milpitas. Dr. Poole supplied other seeds.

To correlate the rate of growth in connection with temperature and humidity, Silva is keeping a twenty-four hour record of both, by means of a recording device kept in the test field.

In another experimental field, planted by Robert Whipple, the results of similar "non-suckering" test were more apparent. Whipple had alternately suckered and left unsuckered rows of Alameda sweet corn, and had completed his harvest. The figures showed that he had taken 684 ears from the suckered rows in three pickings, and 540 ears from the unsuckered in two pickings. Twelve typical ears from each type weighed the same, sixteen pounds.

AGTIVE SEASON FOR BOY SCOUTS WILL START SOON

With the opening of the fall term at local schools, regular meetings of Boy Scout troops throughout the township will begin, according to Harold Benner, assistant district commissioner, who calls attention of parents to the need of cooperation in the scout program.

Benner, who assists District Commissioner Albert Lewis in executive scout work here, states that there is a real need for public interest in the troops in Washington township. He points out that each troop offers training for boys that could be acquired in no other channel. Openings on troop committees, and in other phases of scouting, offer opportunity for interested men to take part in the movement, he said. Anyone interested is urged to get in touch with either Benner or Lewis.

PLAN FOR TENNIS COURT LIGHTING IS TABLED

Submitted to the Lions club board of directors at their meeting Monday night, a plan to install flood-lighting equipment at the high school tennis courts was tabled for the time being. The plan, sent in by a lighting firm, calls for lighting on one court, for night playing. Members of the board did not state as to whether or not the plan would be eventually taken up.

Frank Madruga, famed for his efficient handling of the July Fourth parade, here, was named as a committee of one to arrange for Lions club participation in the Pleasanton Fiesta Del Vino. Madruga will meet with J. J. Amaral, one of the leaders in the Pleasanton fete.

Arrangements were started for the payment of a substantial sum to the Half Moon band, sponsored by the Lions club of that city. The band participated in the parade here last month. Two tickets were received from the Half Moon Bay organization, with a letter asking a Centerville representation at a dance in the coast city in the near future.

DRUIDS INITIATE 11 AT CEREMONIES HERE MONDAY

Eleven new members were initiated into the Centerville grove of Druids Monday night, at ceremonies held at Anderson hall. A huge banquet at the Gregory hotel followed the rites.

With visitors in attendance from Liberty, Live Oak, Washington and Roma Groves, of Oakland, and from the Pleasanton and Livermore groves, the following were taken into the order.

Donald Maciel, Alfred M. Martin, Sabin Ramos, Melvin Vargas and John R. Kettman, all of Newark, and Frank L. George, Thomas Furtado, Vincent Damico, Raymond G. Bettencourt, Edward Dutra and Joseph S. Gomes, of Centerville. The rites were conducted by an initiatory team from Roma grove, Oakland.

To replace the individual visits to each grove in the south county this time, plans are being laid for a joint meeting in November at which R. E. Golway, noble arch, will greet the Centerville, Pleasanton and Livermore groves. Golway, popular leader of the organization, is superintendent of schools in Sacramento county.

COUNTRY COMING BACK, OPINION OF TRAVELERS

Basing their opinion on observations made on four consecutive annual trips across the continent, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Swainson, Centerville beauty specialists, write from Athol, New York, that the country is coming back rapidly. They stated that road conditions, poor in many sections in the past, are much better. Crops are bursting the barns, and huge factories, idle for four years, are again working, some of them twenty-four hour shifts.

In their 9000-mile journey so far, they have passed through many sections where strikes were in progress, but balanced against visible improvements, they attribute the disturbances to readjustment for the better.

Weather conditions on their journey were ideal, they said. They escaped most of the heat and rains, but passed through flood sections.

They were enthusiastic about a trip down the Hudson river, from Albany to New York, and about the races at Saratoga Springs. They attended entertainments at Radio City.

They are planning demonstrations at the Hotel Astor Beauty show and the National convention and beauty show, at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

MADRUGA PLEASED WITH COUNTY FIRE MEET LAST WEEK

Frank Madruga, Centerville assistant fire chief and president of the Alameda County Firemen's Association, stated his utmost satisfaction with the Neptune beach meeting of the county units last week. The gathering was hailed as the best in the annals of the organization. There were more than 175 firemen present from all cities in the east bay region, to witness special displays of fire equipment and methods, staged by Chief Tom Lane and his Alameda firemen.

The next executive board meeting, at which the next regular meeting will be mapped out, is to be held early in October, Madruga said.

Prune Code Gets Rough Handling at Union Meet

Like a good many other government experiments, the prune code is proving to be quite expensive, at least that was the report of J. P. Thomas, of the Prune Code Grower's Committee, given at the Farmers' Union meeting Saturday evening, at Centerville.

With the purchase by the government of 11,800 tons of the standard fruit held in the reserve tonnage, the market is cleared of any hold-over for the first time in many years. The price to be paid by the government will be one and three-quarter cents base.

The growers are being charged around $200,000 for the expenses of the prune cote. There were 40,000 tons in the reserve and the charge for freight was $34,000; for service $95,000; and for office and field equipment, including sacks, $19,000.

Instead of getting the growers a better price, this excessive cost, and the low price paid by both the packer and the government, will result in very little return to the growers for this part of their crop, Thomas said.

Judge Bradley, of Morgan Hill discussed the decision of Judge Louderback, which has been represented in the papers as a victory for the prune code. Instead of being a victory it was this decision which cut the ground from under the code, Bradley held.

E. L. Breeden, of Cupertino, told of the forming of prune and apricot unions in different sections. The object of these unions to protect the growers from rumors, false statements, etc., by giving them reliable information in regard to the markets; when to hold, when to sell, and what price it was reasonable to hold for in selling. One of the main objects of these unions was, however, to get the passage of a law which would compel packers to put an honest label on the packs. Santa Clara prunes to be labelled as such, and Sacramento prunes to go under a Sacramento label, etc. Today the blending of the two is injurious to the prune market, it is said.

also were given physical examinations.

The old bus schedule will be used on Monday, with the changes to be made later in the week.

Changes in the faculty this time include the transfer of B. L. Webb, former day school science teacher, to the principalship of the evening school. Webb's place will be taken on the regular faculty by H. Morgensen, formerly of Sunnyvale. Miss Fisher will replace Mrs. Hockinson. Dwight Thorneburg will have charge of the music classes and orchestra, instructed last year by Salvador Bilieci. Paul Pitman's classes will be taken over by E. Morse. New courses will include mechanical science, agricultural engineering, junior business training and advanced homemaking.

For the latter course, Rathbone has announced an appreciable increase in the budget allowed by the federal government and state. The amount allowed for this work will be jumped from $900 in 1933-34 to $3,643 this time. Rathbone points out that the increase is in recognition of the outstanding progress made in the homemaking departments. The number of students enrolled in it has increased from 20 in 1931 to 207 this time, an increase of over 1000 per cent. He attributes the increase to the interesting way in which the work is presented, and to a growing realization among students that the course is one of the most valuable offered. The teachers are Mrs. J. Morris and the Misses Wilson and Sybil Botelho. The latter has charge of the related work.

With action hanging fire on the allotment of PWA funds for necessary earthquake repairs in the main building, classes will begin in the regular classrooms, but will vacate the building when the repairs are started, Rathbone said.

Several grammar schools will open their doors for the fall term Monday, among them Centerville, Mission San Jose and Alvarado. Niles, Irvington and Warm Springs will open on September 3.

Annual Visit of East Bay Association Social Peak Saturday

More than 600 gathered at the Masonic Home Saturday, when the East Bay Past Matrons' Association of the Order of Eastern Star, composed of forty-eight chapters, paid its annual visit to the Decoto institution. Superintendent F. B. Hartman and Matron Minnie Richardson, of the home, were given honored seats on the main platform. Hartman voiced the appreciation of the home for the continued interest of the past matrons association. He stated that it had been his pleasure to be present at each of the twenty annual visits of the organiation, whose sustaining work was of great importance.

In her remarks, Mrs. Abercrombie stated that while the count had not been made, she thought that the donations this year would exceed those of last time. Mrs. Hellwig, who is a frequent visitor at the home, spoke in high praise of the home and its management, also of the good work done by the matrons' association.

Mrs. Collins, in her opening speech, voiced her thanks and those of other officials, to the Orient Chapter, of this district, for the superb luncheon.

With Mrs. Felter, of the home, at the piano, the program was opened with two verses of America. Minerva Gonzalves, soprano, and Catherine Donahue, contralto, were heard in vocal solos. Isadore Franck, violinist, and Mrs. Felter at the piano, rendered a duet. Mrs. Abercrombie followed selections by the home orchestra with a series of humorous readings, which were enthusiastically received. A reception, honoring the visiting official, closed the program.

Walter Girdner, of the Christian Science church at Hayward, conducted the afternoon services.

On Saturday, August 24, the New England Society, of the east bay, will visit the home.

MORE ON Alvarado Chamber

mittee have been assigned to the task of drawing up the necessary petition. It will be presented for approval Monday night.

In an effort to create a choice residential section for Alvarado, the chamber is seeking information on the possibility of acquiring a plot of ground situated back of the St. Anne's Catholic church. The civic group estimates that 18 choice building lots could be made available, out of the four-acre piece, which is owned by the church at the present time. With incorporation necessary for the borrowing of a sum necessary to purchase the tract, plans for that step will be laid Monday night. The housing committee consists of J. E. Lewis, D. R. Howell and George Hocking.

Additional night patrol supporters are seen, following a thorough canvass of the business section recently by C. W. Baird and J. W. Lewis. A minimum of $2.50 per month is being asked of business firms. A residential canvass is going on at the present time, with an eye to including private homes in the patrol beat. Nightwatchman Russell Larsen has recently acquired full police powers from the office of the county sheriff.

In an effort to have the funds of the old chamber of commerce turned over to the new organization, D. R. Howell has obtained the signatures of all local directors of the old group authorizing the move. J. P. Boyd, former president of the original body will be contacted in the matter. Officials of the defunct chamber are: J. P. Boyd, president; George Hellwig, vice president; H. M. Springer, secretary; John Menezes, treasurer; August May, J. H. Ralph, C. W. Baird and J. Emery, directors.

"Beats Hawaiian Climate" Says Visitor to Niles

Contrary to popular ballyhoo, the climate of Washington township is much more agreeable than that of the Hawiian Islands, at least in the opinion of B. O. Perrson, who is visiting with Mark Yarnell, at Niles. Perrson, on leave from federal duties at Honolulu, has been a resident of the islands for twenty-six years. His son, James, who is visiting here with him, echoes his opinion of the "invigorating" air in California.

The elder Perrson, who says he will locate in this district with his family when he leaves the islands, wil return to his work in Hawaii on Friday, August 30. He will sail on the Lurline. His son will remain for a month longer.

Summer Whimsies About Food

WARM weather plays pranks with appetites. Haven't you known your well-regulated family who like the things they are supposed to like, and enjoy their meals nine months in the year, to suddenly go berserk about food, when the temperature rises?

For this malady, dietitians prescribe an entire change of menus, and a distinct brightening up of the table. If your table linens have been white or pastel shades all winter, use some of the new dark linens. Change everything.

And above all things change your menus. Serve colorful foods. Do you know the infinite possibilities of change of color and flavor by using tomatoes plentifully on your menus? Their healthful properties will pep up jaded appetites, and suddenly your whole dinner will appear appetizing—no matter what the thermometer says.

Tomato Ring with Persian Melon Balls: Strain the contents of one No. 2 can of tomatoes, add one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar and bring to boiling. Soak five teaspoons gelatin in four tablespoons cold water and dissolve in the hot tomato juice. Cool and chill. When about ready to set, add one-half cup of mayonnaise, pour into a wet ring mold and set in the refrigerator to stiffen. Meanwhile cut a Persian melon in small balls and marinate in French dressing. When ready to serve, turn the tomato ring out onto a round platter and fill the center with melon balls. Around the ring place small hearts of lettuce filled with mayonnaise. This serves eight persons.

Steak Casserole: Cut one pound slice of round steak in four servings, salt and pepper each piece and roll in flour. Brown the meat in drippings, then lay them in a casserole and slice over the top one onion, one carrot and one-half of a green pepper. Pour over the contents of one can of tomato soup and two tablespoons water. Cover and bake in a slow oven—350 degrees—for one and one-half hours or until the meat is tender. This serves four persons.*
